Relationships at the Center

City of Providence Mentoring Initiative

Mayor's Office

Providence, Rhode Island

Deadline: February 14, 2022 5pm

MENTOR Rhode Island
Request for Proposals
2022

MENTOR Rhode Island is seeking applications from organizations that serve Providence youth in need of support from a caring adult role model—a mentor. This is a one-time grant opportunity that was appropriated by Mayor Elorza and the City Council through the American Rescue Plan Act. ARPA funds are non-recurring so their use should be applied primarily to non-recurring expenditures. Care should be taken to avoid programs that require an ongoing financial commitment. This grant will invest $750,000 in mentoring programs across the City of Providence in grants ranging from $5,000 - $55,000. Increased amounts may be available to organizations serving gang members and/or previously incarcerated individuals at the discretion of the review committee.

MENTOR Rhode Island is a 501(c)3 dedicated to building the quality of mentoring programs, the number of mentoring programs, and the number of youth matched with mentors. We aim to serve youth who are at risk of dropping out of school or getting involved with the justice system. Mentoring relationships foster positive youth development, increased social and emotional wellness, and academic success through use of the nationally accepted Elements of Effective Practice in Mentoring™.

Expected Outcomes of “Relationships at the Center”

The ultimate outcome is the relationships our young people build and sustain while they are in school and beyond. Over the course of the project, MENTOR Rhode Island will evaluate the following:

- Quantity of relationships measures who is in a young person’s network over time. With increased access to high quality relationships for young people, the better their chances of finding the support they need and the opportunities they deserve.
- Quality of relationships measures how young people experience the relationships they are in and the extent to which those relationships are meeting their relational, developmental, and instrumental needs. Different relationships offer different value as young people’s needs evolve.
- Structure of networks gauges the variety of people a young person knows and how those people are themselves connected. A young person cannot be what they cannot see. Different people with varied backgrounds, expertise, and insights can provide young people with a wide range of options for discovering opportunities, exploring interests, and accessing career options.
- Ability to mobilize relationships assesses a young person’s ability to seek out help when needed and to activate different relationships. Connecting a young person to relationships isn’t enough. Young people must have skills to nurture relationships and recognize how and when to leverage relationships as resources in their life journey.

In the long-term, MENTOR Rhode Island sees the outcomes of continued support of “Relationships at the Center” to be:

- The City will be a relationship-centered community, where young people have a sense of belonging and trust.
- The City will dedicate resources (financial, physical plan, human) to relationship strategy.
- Young people are less likely to engage in violent behaviors.

Grant Award Cycle: This grant will begin on or about April 1, 2022 - June 30, 2023.

Who should apply: Any organization serving the City of Providence who wants to grow their capacity to mentor young people. Existing mentoring programs, youth development programs, schools, community groups, and organizations wishing to begin or strengthen their ability to build relationships and mentor youth are encouraged to apply. If you are not currently a formal organization, we will fund mentoring initiatives that use a fiscal sponsor (a 501(c)3 organization that will handle the financial obligations and reporting of this grant).

In the event your proposal is approved, please save the following full days on your calendar for MANDATORY orientation and training that will occur on each of these days for key personnel:

Wednesday, April 6, Thursday, April 7, and Friday, April 8, 2022

Please note – These are federal government funds so:

- Food cannot be covered through this grant.
- We will ask for short monthly updates on your progress toward goals as well as a more robust final report to meet federal guidelines
- Data collection will occur monthly

In addition to the costs you identify as part of your program expenses, please also include the following in your proposal:

1. Staff time to attend 3 days of orientation/training plus monthly 2 ½ hour “Community of Practice” gatherings and trainings.
2. Local mileage @ .56 per mile or other transportation costs for staff travel related to this grant
3. Staff time for deep dive on program practices depending on your current knowledge and implementation of the Elements of Effective Practice for Mentoring™ . Your current level will not impact your approval odds positively or negatively. Above all, we want to be sure you have the tools you need to implement an effective program for the youth you serve.
  - a. Experienced programs, please add 24 hours of staff time. New programs please include up to 75 hours of staff time. This is in addition to the orientation/training and community of practice hours from number 1 above.

Target Population – Youth ages 10-24 years

MENTOR Rhode Island commits to a fair and transparent process for grant awarding, upholding the tenants of equitable selection as required by the city. The RFP process may prioritize proposals that commit to serving specific groups of Providence youth that are underserved or are at particular risk for negative outcomes. Some examples may include:

- Focus on transitional years as elementary students transition to middle school and 8th graders transition to high school;
- Focus on areas of the city where no programs exist;
- Focus on 15-24 year-olds to support personal and educational/professional success including:
  - Transition from school to work,
  - Transition from school to post-secondary education,
  - College completion to successful transition into career
  - Opportunity youth, defined by youth.gov as young people who are between the ages of 16 to 24 years old and are disconnected from school and work. This developmental time period, also referred to as emerging adulthood, has great potential for individual growth through exploring independence and life opportunities,
  - Current and former gang members and/or previously incarcerated individuals.

GOAL: Youth have access to a positive, caring relationship with a nonparental adult or older peer

STRATEGY: Youth involved with or at risk of entering the Juvenile Justice and/or Dependency System

Youth are matched with an adult mentor and they meet at various times and places throughout the community, at school or at a community center. The type of program will determine how often mentors and mentees will meet and where they will meet. These programs can either be one-on-one mentoring, group mentoring or a combination of both. The types of programs include:

- School-Based
- Site-Based
- Community-Based

One-on-One Mentoring Model

In this traditional model, one mentor is matched with one mentee, and trained program staff monitors the match's progress over the course of 9-12 months. Usually, the matches are deliberate; the mentoring program staff pairs two people based on certain criteria, such as experience, skill sets, goals, personality, and a variety of other factors. Because it's a "familiar" model, people tend to be comfortable with it. This model allows for—and even encourages—the mentor and mentee to develop a personal relationship. The one-on-one nature of the relationship provides the mentee with critical individual support and attention from not only the mentor, but also the program staff.

Best Practices for One-on-One Mentoring programs include:

- Follow all benchmarks of the Elements of Effective Practice for Mentoring™ (recruitment, screening, training and orientation, matching, monitoring and support, and closure)
- Matches meet regularly for a minimum of four hours per month for a minimum of 12 months
- Support and involve parents/guardians (DuBois et al., 2011)
- Provide on-going training for mentors (DuBois et al., 2011)
- Systematically monitor the implementation of the program and matches to ensure high-quality mentoring relationships (DuBois et al., 2011)
- Recruit mentors whose backgrounds are well-matched with program goals (DuBois et al., 2011)
- Match volunteers and youth based on shared interests and similarities (DuBois et al., 2011)

Group Mentoring Model

In a national survey executed by the National Mentoring Partnership, it was found that just as many youth enrolled in mentoring programs in the United States are served through group mentoring models as traditional one-to-one models. There is evidence that group mentoring programs can be effective in fostering at least short-term improvements in a broad range of youth outcomes, including those in the behavioral, academic, emotional, and attitudinal/motivational domains. Additional relational processes, such as group cohesion and belonging and a strong group identity, may also contribute to the outcomes youth experience from group mentoring. A 2002 study found that group mentors facilitating positive peer interactions and promoting behavioral changes in youth were central goals of such programs (Herrera, et al., 2002). Group mentoring programs offer a context for activities that develop mentee skills, change mentee attitudes, and offer positive peer interactions; and that these processes may lead to behavioral outcomes for participants (Kuperminc, 2016). American society tends to support an “independent” sense of self where children are taught to value individuality, and workplaces encourage taking initiative and standing out from others. Group or team mentoring may be a more appropriate cultural fit for youth from cultures or communities that honor an interdependent worldview- in which a greater emphasis is placed on interconnectedness with family and community (Mentoring.org – Critical Mentoring Curriculum).

Best Practices for Group Mentoring programs include:

- Follow all benchmarks of the Elements of Effective Practice for Mentoring™ (recruitment, screening, training and orientation, matching, monitoring and support, and closure)
- Keep groups small. Larger groups may make it difficult for mentors and mentees to develop close relationships, may make formation of subgroups of “cliques” that exclude some members more likely, and may place additional burdens on mentors. Group ratio of mentor to mentee should be no more than 1:4 (Kuperminc, 2016). Programs will be expected to have a strong explanation as to why their program’s mentor to mentee ratio is beneficial to the specific population of youth served.
- A match length of one school or calendar year is necessary to build effective mentoring relationships. Group mentoring programs whose match length is shorter than 10-12 months will be expected to have a strong explanation as to why this shorter match length is beneficial to the youth served or the goal to be accomplished.
- Provide on-going training for mentors (DuBois et al., 2011). On-going post-match training should be planned in response to challenges that may arise for mentors or mentees as the group dynamic develops, including healthy closure of the matches as a group as well as when one member of the group (either mentor or mentee) is exited early.
- Facilitating mentors should be trained in skills such as group facilitation, stages of group development and managing group dynamics (Maslow, G. et al, 2013).

- Program staff should pay specific attention to how groups are formed in order to best serve their unique population. Grouping based on shared experiences or challenges may be beneficial, so long as there is a variety of strategies and viewpoints on how these challenges can be navigated.
- Program staff should ensure that relationships, rather than knowledge or skill-building activities are at the heart of their program. Group mentoring programs should provide moments for facilitated conversation, sharing, and interpersonal connection and continue to offer ongoing support to both mentors and mentees (Kuperminc, 2016).

Why This Strategy is Important

Based on data from The Mentoring Effect (2014), it is estimated that in Providence 1 in 3 youth directly involved or at-risk of entering the juvenile justice/dependency system need a mentor. High quality, enduring relationships with caring adults can lead to a wide range of positive outcomes for young people, including social emotional well-being, leadership skills, higher rates of volunteerism and post-secondary success (The Mentoring Effect, 2014). As an example, the study The Prevalence of Adverse Childhood Experiences (ACE) in the Lives of Juvenile Offenders surveyed 64,329 juvenile offenders, only 2.8% reported no childhood adversity compared to 34% surveyed in the original Center for Disease Control and Prevention study. That means 97% of them had at least one ACE. 50% of the offenders surveyed reported 4 or more ACEs putting them in the high risk category (this compared to just 13% in the original study). This data is incredibly significant because numerous studies link a high ACE score with chronic disease, mental illness, violence, being a victim of violence, and early death. When you raise a child with violence, they have a tendency to become violent” (Center for Child Counseling, ACES and Juvenile Justice Blog, November 7, 2019). Fortunately, the same is also true when you raise a child with a supportive adult including a mentor, the child is better equipped to exemplify love and kindness which are critical elements of a trauma sensitive approach to build resiliency.

Intentional Relationship Integration for Existing Youth-serving Program(s)

THE VISION All youth have access to a web of support from caring adults and peers across educational settings, before school, in-school, and after-school environments, and can form empowering relationships which:

✓ Promote their pursuit of their passions, skills and interests; ✓ Enable their access to and exploration of spaces where these can be pursued; ✓ Help them overcome personal and/or institutional obstacles; and, ✓ Build their networks and social capital. Relationship-centered programming prioritizes supportive relationships as an essential ingredient in a young person’s learning and development; that focusing on relationships will lead to improvements in college and career readiness and well-being for their youth. Relationship-centered programs design all structures, policies, and daily interactions with the goal of fostering or strengthening supportive relationships for youth.

General Application Information

Terms of Agreement

MENTOR RI seeks to invest this funding in 501(c)(3) nonprofit agencies and organizations which serve low-income Providence residents with program-based services that align with the strategy identified in this RFP for Youth Mentoring.

Agencies selected to receive funding through this RFP process will be required to:

- Sign an agreement with MENTOR RI, with the application serving as a component of the agreement.
- Attend all mandatory trainings, meetings, and engage in technical assistance throughout the grant period as described in this RFP:
  - 3 days of orientation/training plus monthly 2 ½ hour “Community of Practice” gatherings and trainings.
  - Allot staff time for deep dive on program’s individual implementation of the Elements of Effective Practice for Mentoring™.
  - Remember to save the following dates on your calendar in the event your proposal is approved:
    - Wednesday, April 6, Thursday, April 7, and Friday, April 8, 2022
  - Monthly data collection is required along with a more robust final report
- Along with the measurements you are including in your proposal, we will include some standardized questions for outcome measurement across all funded programs: Here’s a sample of the types of questions we may ask with final questions to be determined:
  - Compared to when you started in our program, do you feel happier with your life?
  - Compared to when you started in our program, do you feel more hopeful for your adult future?
  - Compared to when you started in our program, do you feel like you know who you are as a person (e.g., your values, your heritage, etc.)?
  - Compared to when you started in our program, do you think you have grown as a person? (open-ended: how so?)

- Compared to when you started in our program do you feel more of a sense that you belong in this community? Do you feel like you belong and matter in this world?
- Has mentee been involved in violence as a perpetrator, victim, or witness?

Data collection is integral to the success of this initiative and will allow us to make the case for additional years of funding as we report on the amazing work of our grantees. Through this proposal, we will cover the initial setup and first year fees for Innovative Mentoring Software a cloud-based tracking and evaluation tool designed specifically for mentoring programs. <https://www.innovativementoring.net> Although we will seek continued funding for subsequent years to support this software, we cannot guarantee it. (You will have the option of continuing it at your organization's expense if necessary.) MENTOR RI will be able to see aggregate data only which will simplify your reporting. Your specific data is private and is not able to be viewed or accessed by us. Use of this database is required for grant recipients.

MENTOR RI will commit funds in support of selected programs for 14 months ending on June 30, 2023. While we will be advocating with the city for additional year(s) of funding, none has been allocated to date and cannot be anticipated nor guaranteed.

If additional funding is secured for subsequent year(s), grant awardees may be considered for additional funding if there is:

- The continued demonstrable need for program services;
- Satisfactory performance of the program to be measured as mutually agreed upon in each separate agreement between the agency and MENTOR RI; and
- The availability of sufficient funding to MENTOR RI.

The deadline to submit applications is Monday, February 14, 2022, prior to 5:00 p.m.

Post-Award Requirements and Disbursement of Funds

In addition to the training, and engagement in the program improvement process, and community of practice meetings previously mentioned, MENTOR RI requires monthly progress reports (both programmatic and financial) along with a more extensive final report. Additional information may be requested from time-to-time, based on our reporting requirements for the funding. The disbursement of funds typically occurs when the contract is executed or shortly thereafter in accordance with the funding agreement between MENTOR RI and the agency.

All grantees will be expected to attend a press conference to celebrate the awards with the city. Date to be determined.
